"FELONIOUS KILLING OF 19-MONTH-OLD"

TWENTY MEN AND THREE WOMEN COMPRISE GRAND JURY

CLIMAX TO 1932 CRIME

Flemington, New Jersey, To-day.
Richard Hauptmann was yesterday indicted on the charge of the murder of the Lindbergh baby by a Grand Jury consisting of 20 men and three women, mostly parents, who were charged by the Judge to indict Hauptmann on a murder charge if the State presented sufficient evidence that the child met its death accidentally, or intentionally, at the hands of Hauptmann.

The Judge said that the Jury had been called for the purpose of presenting evidence which the State thought tended to show that Hauptmann had murdered the Lindbergh baby on March 1, 1932. The evidence, he said, would show that the child had been killed as the result of a blow inflicted by the accused.

The indictment declared that Hauptmann, "On or about March 1, 1932, with force and arms, did wilfully, feloniously, and with malicious aforethought, kill and murder Charles Lindbergh Junior."

THE HEARING OF WITNESSES AND THE DELIBERATIONS OF THE JURY OCCUPIED 4 HOURS, 42 MINUTES. — REUTER.

CARDINALS WIN OVER TIGERS TO SQUARE SERIES

Deciding Baseball Duel At Detroit To-day

MICKEY COCHRANE SPIKED DURING TENSE STRUGGLE

New York, To-day.
Frankie Frisch's St. Louis Cardinals revived their chances for the World's baseball title when they nosed out Mickey Cochrane's American League winners, Detroit Tigers, by a 4 to 3 tally in the sixth game of the World Series at Navin Field, Detroit, yesterday.

Both teams have now won three games each and the result of to-day's clash will decide the championship.

Mickey Cochrane, the Tigers' $100,000 manager and former Philadelphia Athletics' catcher, was taken to hospital after being spiked during the game. An X-ray examination, however, revealed that the wound is not serious, but he will be handicapped with a limp in to-day's game. A ligament in the left knee-cap was pulled.

SPECTATORS COVERED

Rehearsals in preparation for the Grand Military Searchlight Tattoo, to be held in Sookunpoo on November 1, 2, and 3, are now in full swing and there is every indication of an outstanding production being presented.

It is pointed out that every member taking part in the Tattoo will be insured, the stands, material, instruments and material, including third-party risk for every person who attends, has been provided for, so that the admission prices of $7, $5, $3 and $2 for numbered and reserved seats, with the $1 and 50 cents for unreserved seats are quoted at the lowest possible figure in order to cover the expenditure.

Members of every military unit stationed in the Colony are taking part and one of the main ideas of the Tattoo is to provide an opportunity to the public of seeing the various units of the Army performing their work under as realistic conditions as possible.

The Chinese, who are always willing to give assistance, are preparing a very attractive programme of items, including Chinese fencing, gambling lions, and artistic dances; while the Indian Regiments are assisting with a full dress production of one of their native war dances.

DEATH TRAP IN AUSTURIAS

Madrid, To-day.

A grim outrage, which added 52 more deaths to the already high death toll in the Spanish revolution, occurred yesterday, when a lorry-load of shock troops, which was being rushed to the scene of conflict in Asturias, was wrecked with a charge of dynamite.

The death trap was laid by rebels who are continuing guerrilla warfare in the provinces.

The insurrection, which broke out on October 4 when the Socialists and their supporters declared a general strike as a protest against the inclusion of three Catholic Agrarian Party members in the Cabinet, was yesterday contained, though sporadic fighting was reported from several districts. —Reuter.

What Is The Streamline?

A Fashion Mystery Explained

London. What is the new streamline silhouette? The whole fashion world is talking of it, as the motor-car world talked in 1930 when Sir Dennistoun Burney, the airship designer, invented the streamline car.

The streamline is a really new silhouette. Just as Sir Dennistoun decided that it was time the motor-car ceased to be planned on the lines of the old Roman chariot, the Englishman in Paris who has created this new mode feels that twentieth century fashion ought not to follow bygone periods but to develop a line expressive of the age.

Dressmaker's Definition
Here is the motorist's definition of streamline: "The line of the coachwork slopes away from the front wheels and tapers away at the back like the end of an airship, reducing air resistance."

And this is the dressmaker's definition, given by a leading designer: "A long sweep from the shoulder to the hem, undisturbed by even a belt."

"It is the aristocrat of silhouettes," Mr. Val St. Cyr, a West-end designer, said. "But how many people possess the streamline figure?"

"The long outline has all the

CORK TABLE MATS

Cork table mats are so decorative and artistic in colouring that over-mats may be dispensed with except for special occasions. Only those housewives who make a rule for the use of these little cork mats always realise their value for keeping all polished surfaces clear of ugly rings and marks.

The utility of these mats is by no means confined only to the dinner or luncheon table. They are useful in the store cupboard and larder, for trays, and under flower-bowls and vases.

CARTWHEEL HATS

Large cartwheel hats look most attractive on some women, but unless you have been dowered with just the type of face which goes with that sort of millinery, it is more satisfactory to go in for the hat with a slightly curved brim—something like a mushroom shape.

beauty of modern car design. All superimposed effects are avoided; it is the art of elimination applied to fashion as well as to machines. Recent modes have emphasised the shoulder, hip and knee lines. These correspond to the extraneous bits introduced in car design before the streamline revolution.

BRIDGE NOTES

Grand Coup Thrill

by Ely Culbertson.

Coup plays, including the grand-diloquent sounding Grand Coup, are in their essence simply trump-reducing plays. The player who successfully executes one of these plays, which require delicate treatment in the timing, feels very much like the golfer who makes a hole in one or the fisherman who catches the record fish of the season.

Mr. J. Harlin O'Connell practices law in New York during the day, but many of his evenings he devotes to Bridge, especially enjoying the experts' game at Crockford's. It was there recently that the hand below was dealt, which gave to Mr. Furrow, the experience of making his first Grand Coup.

6H Pass Pass Pass

The bidding does not require any particular comment. After North's Jump response in no-trump to Mr. O'Connell's Simple Takeout, the five-heart bid with the seven-card suit and all the honour except the King is clearly indicated. Obviously North lacks the necessary three Aces and the King of a bid suit to bid five no-trump over five hearts and thus unquestionably the correct response to the Slam invitation of five hearts is six hearts.

The Opening lead was a diamond, which was won in Dummy with the Ace. A heart was played from Dummy and the ten finessed, and when West failed to follow suit Mr. O'Connell saw the possibility

Before-And-After.

What is the cause, Brother, of your nervousness, your haggard, pallid countenance, your dyspeptic outlook upon life? These things are foreign to your nature; they do you discredit; you long to shake them off, but don't know how.

No doubt as an educated man, you readily admit that your nerves, your digestion, every organ, muscle, fibre, and even every hair upon your head, draws its sustenance and strength from your blood. So that when your blood is at fault—has become thin, watery, vitiated, impure—it is but natural that your physical machinery should get out of order too!

This agreed, we take the next step forward and point out the remedy. It is none other than the blood-purifier, blood-enricher and blood-maker famous in your boyhood—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

The unrivalled reputation for actual cures accomplished in many countries and among many races of people throughout over half a century of the world's history should be evidence enough of their merit. But that is not all. Scientific hospital tests by skilled physicians have proved beyond shadow of doubt that by rapidly supplying ample quantities of red corpuscles, and fresh life-energy giving haemoglobin, to the whole system through the blood, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do and must necessarily endow weak, nervous, anemic, run-down people like yourself with new vigour, cheerfulness—LIFE!

Let's everywhere all them.

The London Zoo wants a Pterodactyl.

It is the Hoatzin, from British Guiana the nearest equivalent to the flying reptiles of prehistoric times now in existence and one which is extremely difficult to keep in captivity. In fact, the world's record is only six months, held by the last specimen which the Zoo had about four years ago.

"The Hoatzin has some curious habits," an official stated recently, "but perhaps the oddest is its liking for climbing trees by means of a small, finger-like projection from each wing-tip. I wish we could obtain another specimen."

The modern pterodactyl is only one of the many odd animals and birds which the Zoo is anxious to obtain. Perhaps the most hopeless longing of all is for the New Zealand Tuatara Lizard, a "living fossil," whose export has been banned by the Dominion Government.

"No matter how many letters we send to the New Zealand authorities they remain adamant," said the official sadly. "It is the last and smallest—it is only fifteen inches long—representative of an extinct class, and to distinguish it from its more ordinary relatives it carries an extra eye in the back of its head. Not that it seems to have helped it much, for collectors' activities have made it so scarce that there is a considerable danger of its vanishing altogether."

Another animal which has not been seen at the Zoo for over 30 years is the Manatee, a miniature "whale" from South America, which has a liking for brackish water and a deeprooted hatred of captivity.

TWO FISTIC BOASTERS KNOCKED OUT

Findlay, O. A. O. Smith, 35, Desher, O., and L. H. Dill, 33, Weston, O., strode into the Mecca Inn and boasted of their fistic prowess. Harry Swisher, a waiter at the inn, called their bluff, and laid them both to a count on the floor.

of making his first Grand Coup. The spade finesse was taken and a club was led and trumped. Dummy was then re-entered with a diamond, and the heart finesse was taken the second time.

Another diamond put the Declarer in the Dummy again, and he led the Ace of clubs, upon which East discarded the spade nine and which South ruffed with the eight of hearts. The Dummy was re-entered by leading the last spade, and East's heart honour was trapped.

The hand is interesting from another standpoint and that is that should a club be opened the Grand Coup must be played for on the first lead. If, with the club lead, the Ace is played from Dummy and a spade or diamond is discarded from the closed hand, East's heart King can not be captured because of the lack of the necessary number of entries in the Dummy.

It will also be noted that unless all the diamonds are played before the third club is led from Dummy, the coup cannot be made, because that line of play would permit East to discard a diamond.

A very interesting and well-played hand.

"I AM A FUGITIVE FROM THE CHAIN GANG"—ORIENTAL THEATRE.

Taken from the sensational book of that title by Robert E. Burns, who twice escaped from a chain gang and who is still a fugitive, "I Am a Fugitive From the Chain Gang," a Warner Brothers production, is now showing at the Oriental Theatre.

It is a thrilling and realistic depiction of life in an American prison camp, and Paul Muni carries off the highest honours of his career.

The story is an intensely dramatic one, and is based on the actual experiences of Burns, who was sentenced to a chain gang for 10 years for the theft of less than five dollars. Not only are the terrors of chain gang life depicted, but also the thrilling episodes of Burns' two escapes.

"RIPTIDE"—STAR THEATRE

"Riptide," featuring beautiful Norma Shearer and Robert Montgomery, is Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's current production, now showing at the Star Theatre.

Herbert Marshall portrays the part of Lord Philip Raxford with flawless characterisation. Miss Shearer is in a class by herself and Robert Montgomery is once again at his best. The late Lilyan Tashman and Mrs. Patrick Campbell are in the cast.

The picture is a sex comedy drama of marriage and divorce in titled society. Herbert Marshall excels as the jealous husband, and as the lover.

"WHERE SINNERS MEET"—KING'S THEATRE

Diana Wynyard and Olive Brook, the stars of "Cavalade," are again together in R.K.O.-Radio's romantic comedy "Where Sinners Meet," now at the King's Theatre.

The story, adapted from A. A. Milne's "The Dover Road," is an extremely subtle comedy, interspersed with genuine drama. It deals with the dilemma of English husbands and wives who find themselves chained to each other for life.

The claim of some jurists that it is better to grant divorces in the preliminary stages of marital unhappiness than to permit it to drag along for years, is humorously expounded.

Billie Burke, Reginald Owen, Alan Mowbray, Phyllis Barry, and Walter Armitage lend excellent support.

BRITISH BOXING RECEIPTS GAINS-PETERSEN BOUT NOT A SUCCESS

WORLD TITLE NEXT GOAL FOR PETERSEN?

LONDON, SEPTEMBER 10. M. JEFF DICKSON, THE PROMOTER OF THE RECENT JACK PETERSEN-LARRY GAINS FIGHT AT THE WHITE CITY STADIUM, MADE THE RATHER SURPRISING ESTIMATE YESTERDAY THAT, IN SPITE OF THE RECORD CROWD OF 64,000, THE TAKINGS WOULD FALL MUCH BELOW THOSE AT SOME PREVIOUS CHAMPIONSHIP CONTESTS.

The receipts have yet to be calculated, but the figure mentioned to me was £10,000—which would mean that, with Petersen taking £5,000 and Gains a percentage amounting to, roughly, £2,500, there would not be much left after the expenses of promotion had been met.

THESE COMPARATIVELY SMALL FIGURES, IN VIEW OF THE SIZE OF THE ATTENDANCE, ARE EXPLAINED BY THE LOW CHARGES MADE.

SCOTT'S DEFEAT OF TOLLEY

Greatest Triumph Of His Career

WEST OF ENGLAND OPEN

(By GEORGE GREENWOOD)

The Hon. Michael Scott has gained probably the greatest triumph of a long and distinguished career on the links. He beat Cyril Tolley 4 and 3 in the 36 holes' final of the West of England Open Championship—at Burnham-on-Sea.

Apart from the fact that, at the age of 57, Scott was giving away 19 years, he had as opponent one of the world's longest drivers, a man who, in the championship at Troon in 1923, drove the first green, a distance of 358 yards.

Three times during the Jubilee Vase competition in 1935, Tolley drove the last green (364 yards) at St. Andrews. Yet Scott beat this big, powerfully built man, who often left him 50 yards behind in the drive. If great length is to be a decisive factor, it has to be allied to accuracy, especially on a course like Burnham, with its vast network of penal sandhills waiting for the crooked shot.

Why Tolley Failed

In Tolley's case the alliance of length and accuracy did not always materialise; hence his defeat. It is a simple matter to visualise the slow-moving, shrewd and calculating Scott, adhering faithfully to the plan of keeping the ball on the course and leaving the rest to look after itself. If Tolley outdrove him by "a mile" it could not be helped; in any event, Scott would reach the green in the same number of shots—often fewer—so nothing was lost.

FOOTBALLER'S DEATH DIVE WHILE BATHING

Evidence that the swell made the water four feet deep one minute and one foot deep the next was given at the inquest at Torquay recently on Alexander Wright, 30, of West Asham-street, Kilmarnock, Charlton Athletic's goalkeeper, who fractured his spine in diving at Torre Abbey Sands.

A verdict of death by misadventure was returned.

Through tickets at 48 for the second day of the Eighth Extra Race Meeting—tomorrow—will be on sale until 11 a.m. to-morrow.

The sweeping victory of Katherine Rawls in the decathlon and her new world's record for the 50-meter free style event at the swimming turnery at Jones Beach, L.I., leaves no doubt about who is ace among the women water performers. She was first in all 10 events of the decathlon. Katherine, 17, and a resident of Miami, Fla., is shown in action.

JACK-KNIFE DIVE:

The front jack-knife, or pike dive is the same level. When near water is deservedly popular. It can be straightening body, and drop arms fixed board. Like many fancy dives it begins and ends as the plain header, but has special body position held during flight. To understand this position stand with the left knee and bend forward at hips, keeping head up, till hands touch ankles.

For the dive make usual outward and upward spring. As soon as you are in the air bring the legs forward till hands touch ankles. Fall with head and feet at about

AQUATIC GALA TO AID M.C.L.

Military Branch Hold Sports Meeting

An entertaining swimming gala in aid of the military branch of the Ministering Children's League was held at the V.R.C. last night with the following results:

Long Plunge.—Men, Major Kennedy; Women, Mrs. Mead.

Ballon Race.—Mrs. Finlay and partner; 2, Miss Wolf and partner.

Three-legged Race.—1, Miss Wolf and Mr. Andrews; 2, Miss J. Dowling and Mr. Abbott.

Pillow Fighting.—Women, Mrs. Mead; Men, Capt. Duchesne.

But Trimming Race.—1, Miss Scott Harston and Mr. Chatham; 2, Miss Joan Snayley and Mr. Hebert.

Best Trimmed Hat.—Miss Scott Harston's.

Mixed Relay Race.—Mr. Andrews' team (Miss Wolf, Miss Scott Harston, Mrs. Mead, Messrs. Andrews, Chatham and Mead).

This decision has been conveyed to the Organizing Committee of the Games by M. Nicolas Schmitt, the Secretary General of the Luxembourg Olympic Committee.

Thus to the 33 countries, which have already expressed their determination to take part in the 1936 contests there is added a nation, which, in recent years, after most careful examination of the the corresponding organisations throughout Europe, has built up the most modern organisation for physical education that exists in the world.

"As many as 15,000 people paid the modest price of 2s. 6d., I was told. "The seats were much dearer when Petersen fought Len Harvey, so that although the attendance then was thousands below that of Monday night the receipts reached £15,000."

The general expectation was that the record of £30,000, taken at the Beckett-Carpenter contest shortly after the war, would be surpassed, but there is one man at least who is well satisfied with the result of the venture.

Petersen returned to Cardiff with £5,000 cheque in his pockets, his prestige even higher than before, and with the prospect of matches that will bring a rich harvest.

One proposal is that he should meet Walter Neusel, of Germany; there is another match awaiting him with George Cook, Australia's veteran; while "Pa" Petersen continues to talk mysteriously of fat American contracts already in his pockets.

Jack Dempsey's offer, too, has to be considered. The old champion, much impressed by the defeat of Gains, cabled anew his proposal to take over the control of Petersen and to make him into a world champion.

The World Title
Apart from the engagement with Neusel and a prospective return bout with Len Harvey, the future in Great Britain holds little for Petersen.

America and the world's championship must now be his goal. His fearless fighting would make a tremendous hit in the States, and there seems no limit to his earning capacity.

His ambition to earn a fortune which would make retirement permissible in three or four years becomes a definite possibility. Petersen has no intention of growing old in the game. He is out to

CHILEAN TEAM FOR OLYMPIC GAMES

Winner Of Medal At Amsterdam Meet

The Olympic Committee of Chile decided in July to accept the German invitation to the Olympic Games, and to send a team to Berlin.

Before the Chilean team proceeded to the Olympic Games at Amsterdam in 1928, its members dwelled and trained for a short time to acustom themselves to the European climate at the Grunewald Stadium in Berlin, which is now being adapted for the Games of 1936.

At Amsterdam Chile gained a silver medal for second place in the Marathon. She was not represented at Los Angeles four years later, yet it is expected that the Olympic vanguard of 1928 will be followed by a really strong army in 1936.

make money fast, and hang up his gloves while still young, as did Gene Tunney.

For Gains the twilight of his career has arrived. He realises and so does his manager, who admitted frankly to me yesterday that perhaps 15 rounds was now too far for Gains to travel. Had the contest been scheduled for 10 rounds the Canadian must have taken the verdict on points, and he is willing to fight Petersen again over that distance for a $500 wager. I doubt whether anything will come of this. Petersen finished such an emphatic winner that a return fight could never make the same appeal.

Old Brandy

How thoroughly used up was Gains when the end came is emphasised by the following story. When he slumped on to his stool at the close of the 18th round Gains was asked, "How do you feel?" "Not so hot," he said, "but I'll go on if you want me to." "So we gave him smelling salts, massage, water, and everything we could think of," explained his manager.

Breast Stroke Expert
Kwok Chun-hang, China's breast-stroke champion, is expected to carry off the 100 yards breast-stroke event without serious opposition, but the 100 Yards backstroke event will see a titanic struggle between four of the Colony's best, Lau Po Hay (record holder at 69.25 secs.), L. Rozza-Ferreira (champion) W. Lawrence, and Shek Kam-pui.

The H.K. University are the only contenders against the two V.R.C. teams in the Relay.

"But Larry showed no response. He was all in."

"Then we gave him a stiff dose of old brandy, but that too failed to revive him, so I threw in the towel."

Gains considers that he was unfortunate to be caught by a smashing body punch at a time when he was travelling strongly, but he was full of generous praise for his conqueror.

"Petersen is a great fighter, and I wish him all the luck in his bid for the world title," he said. "But his defence is still not good, and he must try to improve it."

JUNIOR MANX GRAND PRIX

WON BY HERTS SCHOOLMASTER

AMATEUR RECORDS BROKEN

Douglas (I.O.M.), Sent. 12.

J. H. White, a bespectacled schoolmaster living at Radlett, Herts, won the Junior Manx Grand Prix motor-cycle race to-day on a Norton machine.

His time for six laps of the Tourist Trophy course was 2hr. 59min. 44sec. and his average speed 75.59 m.p.h. White made a magnificent race, and held the lead throughout.

Though challenged by D. J. Pirie, an architect, of Old Southgate, London, riding a Norton, and Austin Munks, a motor agent, of Boston, Lincolnshire, riding a Velocette, White widened the gap between himself and his challengers on every lap and won by a margin of 3 min. 11 sec.

He thrice broke the junior amateur record which he set up last year, and his last lap, which he did in 29min. 25sec. at 76.97 m.p.h. was the fastest of the race.

Keen Battle

Pirie and Munks, last year's winner, fought a keen battle for second and third positions and eventually only 4 sec. made Pirie the runner-up at an average speed of 74.29 m.p.h.

The winner of the lightweight class, which was run in conjunction with the main race, was W. D. Mitchell, an Aberdeen clerk, riding a Colton. His time was 3 hr. 33 min. 58 sec., and his speed 63.49 m.p.h.

There were several spills in the race but no serious accidents. J. H. Blyth, of Kirkcaldy, riding a Velocette, was travelling hard towards Ballinagh Bridge when his engine seized and he was thrown.

R. Allen, of Grimsby, riding a Norton, was following and narrowly escaped running into Blyth and his machine as they lay on the ground. Blyth was uninjured but had to retire on account of the damage done to his machine. Of fifty-nine starters thirty-four completed the course. The prizes were distributed in the Palace ballroom, by Sir Algernon Guinness.

WINE FOR FRENCH RUGBY PLAYERS

Protection Against Winter

Jean Galia, the old Rugby international, is searching for a 37-gallon cask of French wine.

It is part of the equipment of the Rugby League tourists Galia has brought across the Channel for the North of England tour—and it is missing.

The Frenchmen, many of them new to England, arrived prepared to play in fog, snow, or any other weather, but they felt fortified by the wine.

Apparently they are used to a half-time drink, and until they can trace the lost wine they are acquiring a taste for tea.

Different countries, different customs. Imagine what a League football club manager would say if his team arrived at the ground with a cask of beer!

RUGBY POPULAR WITH WOMEN

Free Admission To Be Rescinded

Rugby football is becoming too popular with women.

That, evidently, is the view of the Finchley club, for at their meeting next week it will be proposed that "the resolution admitting women to the ground free be rescinded."

This concession has been in operation for some time, and the fair on-lookers have been turning up in such numbers that the club treasurer must have grown envious.

LOCAL RUGBY PLAYER DUE BACK ON SATURDAY

Dr. J. H. McElroy, local Rugby interpreter and former captain of the Club, arrives back in the Colony on Saturday by the s.s. Sappho. He has been elected on the Club Committee for the 1934-5 season.

CORRESPONDENCE

SOCCER FEES ALLEGED TOO HIGH

[To the Editor, "China Mail"]

Sir,—Many letters appeared in the press last season anent the very exorbitant prices for admission charged by local football clubs, but nothing seems to have been done about it.

On Sunday I had to pay $1.10 (approx. 1/9d.) to see South China play the Hong Kong Club at Caroline Hill. I will admit that I saw a good game, but no better than a schoolboys' game which I could see at Home for 6d., and certainly nowhere approaching a First Division or an International match which I could see for a 1/—.

Army Cup matches at Home are streets ahead of local football yet 3d. is considered sufficient fee to see these games. It reminds me of that joke of the man who entered a palatial hotel, ordered a steak, and had to pay 3/6d. for it; 6d. for the steak and 3/— for the pictures on the wall: the man, protesting, said he could have a feast of pictures in the Art Gallery for 6d. On the same principle, how much of my $1.10 was for the football, and how much for the new grandstand, relaying of the grounds, etc.? I can see all the nice buildings I want, the majority better than Caroline Hill's grandstand, by paying 10 cts. for a trip in the Star Ferry.

In conclusion, can you, Sir, or any of your readers, honestly assert that any game of football played locally, Interport Matches included, is worth 1/9d.?

"DAI LOSSIN."

The Cardinals took the lead in the fifth innings, hitting two runs to bring the score to 3 to 1.

Paul "Daffy" Dean, brother of "Dizzy" Dean, was moundsman for the "Cards," while Lynwood "Schoolboy" Rowe was hurler for the Bengals of the Middle West.

Fighting desperately, the Tigers levelled the score in the sixth innings, but the National League champions went ahead to clinch the game by 4 to 3.

TO-DAY'S FINAL CLASH

The eyes of the baseball world will be centred on Navin Field, Detroit, to-day where the American sports classic, the World Baseball title, will be decided between the National League winners, St. Louis Cardinals, who are favourites, and Mickey Cochrane's "wonder baseball team of 1934," Detroit Tigers, American pennant winners.

The "Cards" have won the title on two occasions, after winning the National pennant on four occasions, but the Tigers have yet to become world champions. Aided by Mickey Cochrane's managing genius, the Motor-City squad have won the American championship for the first time in 26 years. They won the pennant for three successive years, in 1907, 1908 and 1909, but were beaten on each occasion in the World Series.

WORLD SERIES RESULTS

St. Louis Cardinals won the first game of this year's World Series at Detroit on Wednesday by a margin of 8 to 3, but the Tigers drew level in the second game, knocking out the "Cards" by a 3 to 2 tally. Journeying to St. Louis on Friday the "Cards" went ahead with a win by 4 to 1, but the Middle West team again squared matters with a 10 to 4 victory on Saturday. In the last of the three games at St. Louis, Detroit took a 3 to 2 lead on Sunday by a 3 to 1 margin.

St. Louis, however, brought the issue to 8-all in yesterday's clash, winning by a 4 to 3 tally.

ANGLO-AMERICAN GOLFING DIFFERENCE

Temperament is perhaps the essential difference between Americans and Britons generally—certainly it is the essential difference between the British golfer and the American golfer. Americans believe, in expression, we pride ourselves on our repression. They like to play to a full house—the fuller the better—F. M. Hornbrook.

WOODFULL'S LAST APPEARANCE

Yorkshire Agree To Extra Change

OFFER OF TWO MEN TO HELP ENGLAND

(By TOM CLARKE)

Scarborough, September 10.

On my way to the Cricket Festival at Scarborough yesterday, where the Australians met Mr. Leveson-Gower's team, I heard canny Yorkshire folk asking why they should have to pay 2s. 6d. to see the Australians play when, on earlier days of the festival last week, they had to pay only 1s. 6d. to see the Englishmen play.

I was among them later when Bradman was knocking up his dazzling 132, and heard them agree that, after all, it was worth the extra charge.

It certainly was, and it may interest these converted Yorkshire enthusiasts to know that Bradman himself thinks he has done nothing better on this tour than his innings yesterday.

Lost In Admiration

Yorkshire air must suit him. His colleagues agree it was Bradman at his best, playing as only he can play.

Thousands of gleeful spectators were lost in admiration at the beauty and variety of his strokes, his carefree clouting of the ball—he hit 24 4's and one 6—and his marvellous eye.

Bradman passed the 2,000-runs aggregate, an honour shared, too, by McCabe yesterday. Such a large crowd assembled outside the hotel yesterday, including dozens of girls with autograph books, that Bradman, for whom they persistently called, had to escape by the back door.

Woodfull's Swan Song

Despite the increased entrance charge, there was a very big attendance, and the back windows of a remarkable array of boarding-houses surrounding the ground provided a free view for many visitors. I counted 100 heads, and then gave up!

This match has a special interest for Australians, and I am sure, for English lovers of cricket, in that it marks Bill Woodfull's swan song in big cricket.

He will not be going to Scotland for the final match of the tour, so this is the last time he will be seen on this side of the world. When he is back in Australia, Woodfull will retire from big cricket, and devote all his time to his work as a schoolmaster.

Sporting Gesture

The son of a well-known Melbourne minister of religion, Woodfull first visited England with Col. Lindsay's team in 1926. He has been Test captain since 1930. He is aged 37. Though quiet and unobtrusive, he has a very lovable character, without any venom.

It is not generally known that during the final Test, when England was sorely handicapped by casualties, he offered to place two members of his team at the disposal of England as substitutes.

That other very sporting skipper, Wyatt against whom Woodfull is pitted again in the Scarborough match, deeply appreciated the gesture, although he felt unable to accept the offer.

The plan worked precisely as it had done at Hoylake two years ago, when Scott beat, first the young and dashing George Dunlop, the American champion, and then T. A. Bourn. Scott never left the middle of the course, while the others wandered here, there and everywhere.

Twenty-one Years After

It is a remarkable tribute to the fitness of a man of Scott's age that he should capture a championship which he first won twenty-one years ago. Among rollers of his age, Scott has no rivals; he stands absolutely alone. On Saturday next, as captain of the Royal and Ancient Club's team, he will, with J. McLean, L. G. Garnett and Bourn, for Australia, to take part in the Melbourne centenary celebrations. Scott was winning championships in Australia thirty years ago, and score of 65.

PETERSEN MUST DEFEND TITLES AGAINST COOK

First Australian Boxer To Offer Challenge

PETERSEN'S AMERICAN VISIT OFF?

London, Sept. 10.
Jack Petersen, of Cardiff, British and Empire heavy-weight champion, is to fight George Cook, of Australia, for both titles. The British Boxing Board of Control have instructed the management of the two boxers to arrange this contest at an early date, after which the Board will ask promoters for the best purse. The Board have wasted no time in calling upon Petersen to defend his two titles, and their action would appear to negative any possibility of Petersen going to America for the time being.

Cook, Australian born, qualifies for a fight for the championship of Great Britain only by residence. He will be the first boxer not born in the British Isles to fight for the native championship. He has earned the right by a long and successful career in all corners of the world.

Always Fit

Cook fought Gains for the Empire title in May last year, when Gains won. Cook, who has been resident in England for the past three years, was overjoyed when he heard the news to-day.

"It is great," he said. "I had been promised the fight, but I never expected to get it so soon. I feel very proud of the fact that I shall be the first Colonial ever to fight for the home title. I shall train more seriously than ever, and I think that this time my additional experience will carry me through."

"Petersen is young and fiery, and I know a lot of people look me as an old man, but I am in the pink of condition always—and experience counts a lot."

Cook, with his wife and daughter, to-day left for a short holiday on the Hampshire coast.

"Pa" Petersen's View

"Pa" Petersen, the champion's father-trainer-manager, interviewed at his hotel in London to-day, said: "It is the first I have heard of it, but, of course, the official statement shows that the fight is on. I knew that we should have to meet Cook sooner or later. Quite candidly I do not mind when it is. One fight is very much like another to us."

Questioned as to American arrangements, Mr. Petersen, senior, refused to be drawn.

"This fight would make no difference if we decided to go to America," he said. "We should leave to-morrow if I said so. Jack has beaten Cook before—in Cardiff, on points in a non-title fight. What he has done, once he can do again. He has not gone back, and Cook is older."

Mr. Petersen was equally reticent about the suggestion that Jack Dempsey has offered to become Petersen's American manager. Dempsey has said, it is stated, that for a third of Jack's earnings he will make him world champion in a year or two.

All that Mr. Petersen would say on the matter was: "I have nothing to discuss."

Harvey Says

Len Harvey says: "I am disappointed that I have not got the match. I cannot see why Cook should be preferred to me. I have beaten both Petersen and Gains, and they have both beaten Cook. Anyhow I hope my turn will come. I am fit as a fiddle and ready for Petersen or anyone else."

"In the meanwhile I have my light heavyweight title to think about. The Board have set me against Phillips at Manchester. Why Manchester?"

In the light of recent events there seems no reason why he should not win another.

In the final at Burnham Scott won the first two holes each in a par 4. Tolley squared at the fourth, but playing erratically, lost five of the next twelve holes. With a score of 76, Scott finished the first half of the match four up, Tolley having taken 80. In the afternoon Scott won the second to become five up again, and then every hole to the turn was halved. Despite a supreme effort, Tolley could make no impression on his imperturbable opponent. For the fifteen holes in the second round each had a score of 65.

UNEMPLOYMENT SHOWS DECREASE IN GREAT BRITAIN

On September 24 the numbers of unemployed persons on the registers of employment exchanges were 1,647,673 wholly unemployed, 452,696 temporarily stopped, and 81,618 normally in casual employment, which was 54,591 less than the month before, and 254,740 less than the year before.

The feature of last month's return was the reduction in the number of employed in areas which have suffered most severely during the depression. In the Midland Administrative Division the reduction during the month was 34,313, North Eastern 31,618, and the North Western 9,383. There were slight increases in the Southern counties—British Wireless Service.

MORE COAL HOISTS AT CARDIFF

Mechanical Spade Provided

The Great Western Railway Company have completed the second of two new coal hoists on the East side of the Roath Basin, Cardiff, completing the programme of improvements under the Development (Loans, Guarantees, and Grants) Act, 1923.

The new hoist, at the southern end of the basin, has been erected on a jetty, 50 ft. from the quay, which permits of vessels being "scarfed," so that two large ships can load simultaneously at this quay.

In addition to escalator-type anti-breakage devices to both hoists, a mechanical spade or digger is being installed on the quayside hoist to facilitate the loading of washed dust and other coals that do not run freely, while screens have been provided for the jetty hoist. These hoists have a lifting capacity of 60 ft., so that vessels high out of the water can be readily bunkered.

ENGINE-BUILDING AT CREWE

Included also in the total are 2-8-0 tender locomotives for working heavy freight trains; these are of a new design prepared by the company's chief mechanical engineer, Mr. W. A. Stanier, and will be built at Crewe.

The remaining engines are of the 4-6-0 three-cylinder, 4-4-0 mixed-traffic, 2-6-2 passenger tank, and 2-6-4 three-cylinder tank types.

SOCIALISED STEEL INDUSTRY

Very Little Desired State Council

SUBMITTED TO T. U. C.

A scheme for the socialisation of the iron and steel industry was outlined in the report which the General Council prepared for submission to the Trades Union Congress at Weymouth. There would probably be very little desire, the Council say, to have the socialised industry "conducted as a State Department on the lines of the Post Office." "The possibility of international difficulties," they go on to say, "must be considered in the case of an industry carrying on a highly competitive trade if such a form of organisation was adopted."

At the same time, it would probably be thought unsuitable from the point of view of flexibility and freedom from direct political influence. The scheme put forward by the Iron and Steel Trades Confederation itself proposes to bring the industry within the control of a public corporation, and, after full consideration, we believe this is the best form of organisation. The best course, from both technical and commercial points of view would probably be to create a board, for each of the separate branches—e.g., pig-iron, ingots and semi-products, tinplates, and so on—there being ten or a dozen in all, the precise demarcation being a technical matter which would be determined by those who are charged with the direction and conduct of the industry.

Each of these sections should have a considerable degree of internal autonomy, but it would be necessary to have some machinery for co-ordinating them and for planning the industry as a whole."

Compensation Question

The compensation to be paid to existing interests on the socialisation of the industry must depend, in the opinion of the Council, on the general circumstances prevailing at the time of socialisation. "The basis of compensation might, well be," they say, "the reasonable net maintainable revenue of the undertakings concerned, having regard also to whatever financial benefits have already been conferred on the industry by any Government assistance."

If the public, by granting protection or any other form of assistance, has materially improved the prospects of the industry, it would not be right that the public when taking over concerns should pay more on that account.

The form to be taken by compensation is, in fact, not a matter of the first importance. It might take the form of redeemable Government bonds, bearing fixed interest or the form of terminable annuities."

Board Of Ten

The Corporation would have a board of about 10, appointed by the President of the Board of Trade, on the ground of their competence to conduct the affairs of the industry. "Each of the large divisions of the industry would have a sectional board appointed in the same way. Prices would be fixed in conjunction with a body representing the interests of consumers. As far as foreign markets were concerned," the Council say, "prices would, of course, have to conform to those of competing nations. Whether the central body should be permitted to charge higher home prices in order to subsidise foreign markets is a matter of general policy which goes far beyond the iron and steel industry itself, and is a matter needing careful consideration. The extent also to which the home market for iron and steel products would be protected is a matter for serious consideration in the case of a nationalised industry."

ENGINEERING FEAT IN AMERICA

Cable Replacement At Boulder Dam

Boulder City, Nev. One of the unsung exploits in the construction of the gigantic Boulder Dam is the replacement of the huge cables stretching across the dam site.

The cables are used to convey men, concrete and other materials in building America's most ambitious water and power project. It is necessary to stop all operations four 48-hours to replace the cables.

Wound on huge spools, the cables, each weighing 55,000 pounds, are placed near the head tower of the cableway and one end is strung to and through the top of the tower.

The new cable is dragged across the canyon and fastened to the old steel rope. After the new cable is secured by supports which also hold the old cable, the used steel rope is hauled away. Each cable is 2500 feet in length and costs approximately $10,000.

DENMARK'S GIANT BRIDGE

$50,000,000 Structure Over Great Belt

Denmark is now completing the building of a gigantic bridge across the Great Belt to facilitate the traffic with Germany and the Continent. Another bridge across the Little Belt for more speedy connections with England via Esbjerg, is being planned.

Danish engineers are also planning to build still another big bridge across the Sound between Elsinore and Helsingborg on the Swedish side. Thus Denmark hopes to form herself into a giant railway junction of Scandinavia. This last bridge is calculated to cost $50,000,000.

Empire Trade

Britain and the dominions are no longer as complementary, economically, as they were. When the colonies were first discovered or annexed they served as an outlet for surplus production, provided food and raw materials for Britain's secondary industries, and constituted a valuable and increasing market for British manufactures. Trade between the colonies and foreign countries was relatively insignificant, and Britain and the colonies were a highly co-ordinated economic bloc. That still remains a popular ideal, but it is no longer a reality. The dominions are no longer mere granaries and farms for raw materials, no longer exclusively a market for British exports. With the inevitability of natural growth, the dominions are becoming increasingly self-sufficient and independent. Britain also is finding some difficulty in reconciling her own commercial interests with those of the dominions, and that difficulty may be expected to increase. This problem has arisen from no sudden and surprising trick of fate, nor can it be attributed to the successive crises of the last few years, though the reaction of foreign countries first to the experience of the war, and secondly to the depression, has accelerated and accentuated inevitable developments. The trend towards economic self-sufficiency in the dominions was only a matter of time.

As the primary production of the dominions exceeded the demands of the British market, the surplus had to be disposed of to foreign countries. To receive payment for this, the dominions had to import an increasing amount from foreign countries, and the exchange of goods with Britain became but a part of dominion trade balances. Similarly, Britain could produce more manufactures than the dominions could buy, and could invest more capital than they could use. This surplus also went to foreign countries, from which Britain had to import enough goods to pay for exports, and pay interest and repay borrowed capital. In consequence, Britain's trade with foreign countries like the Argentine became at least as important as that with any one of the dominions, and divergence of interests followed as a matter of course. The necessity for adjusting trade balances in the last few years to meet national commitments, and preserve national solvency, has aggravated this position. To make matters worse, the nationalist policy fostered by the desire of European countries to be independent of sea-borne food supplies in the event of war, has evoked an ever-narrowing conception of commercial reciprocity. Nations are universally striving to be as self-sufficient as possible, and beyond that to trade only with countries prepared to establish mutual balances. For single nations this may be practicable, but it is extremely difficult for Britain and the dominions to reconcile their mutual interests with the claims of foreign countries for greater reciprocity.

So far there has been a tendency in Britain and the dominions to try to enjoy the full advantages of Imperial unity without any sacrifice of foreign trade in consequence. It is clearly an attempt to eat their cake and keep it, but the insistence of foreign countries for more favourable treatment brings daily nearer the parting of the ways. Sooner or later, Britain and the dominions must commit themselves to definite, constructive policies. One of these is to subordinate foreign trade advantages to Imperial interests, to sacrifice if need be profitable markets in foreign countries in order to maintain a maximum trade between Britain and the dominions. For this to be satisfactory, either the old complementary relationship would have to be restored, or a redistribution of population be rapidly accomplished. In the first instance, the dominions would have to revert to their earlier functions of exclusive primary production, and Britain abandon the present agricultural policy. Apart from the fact that anything so comprehensively reactionary would find little support in any part of the Empire, it would probably involve restricted production by the dominions of their surviving primary industries, and by Britain of manufactures. The alternative would involve the development of a high degree of self-sufficiency by all the units of the Empire, and exclusive Imperial preference in respect of the relatively small amount of overseas trade then necessary. Self-sufficiency by Britain and the dominions would, however, demand a decrease of population in Britain, and an increase of population in the dominions, to bring primary and secondary production nearer equilibrium in each of them. The problems involved in the pursuance of such a policy are formidable, and call for greater co-operation and co-ordination of effort than has so far been attained, but they are by no means insurmountable.

ABOLITION OF SNEAKING

That unpopular character, the Common Informer, is going to be attacked by the particular sort of Parliamentary move which, on past showing, very rarely succeeds. When Parliament reassembles Sir Gerald Hurst, K.C., will bring in a one-clause Bill under the ten-minute rule to enact that no court shall entertain an action in the name of a Common Informer.

This, of course, will have no chance this session: Sir Gerald's object is to get other members to ballot for a place for it in the subsequent one.

Another line of attack suggested is that the Common Informer should be referred to Lord Hanworth and the Law Revision Committee, who are dealing with obsolete statutes.

That would seem a more hopeful method than Sir Gerald's attempt to get by Captain Margesson's bland smile of refusal or his fellow-members' jealousy of all private Bills.

THE OLD SCHOOL

The suggestion that Thetford Grammar School might be the oldest in England has been turned down, with kindly severity, by an old boy of King's Cathedral School, Canterbury.

He states that it was settled by an antiquarian in 1897 that King's is coeval with the establishment of the cathedral by St. Augustine. That would put the foundation date at 600 A.D.

Another, less determined, says that St. Albans School is believed to date from the ninth century. He adds an interesting theory that St. Albans would have been made a university by James I. If Francis Bacon, an old boy, had not been impeached at a crucial moment.

BRITAIN IS NOT A
DEBTOR NATION
"INVISIBLE EXPORTS"
FACTOR

WIDESPREAD INVESTMENTS

(By Andrew Still)

The short answer to this question: Are We a Debtor Nation? would be emphatically No.

But the question no doubt has arisen in the public mind owing to the prominence given in the Press recently to the adverse exchange rates on London and the fall of the level on record. A golden sovereign is now worth approximately 33s. at home, but the pound sterling is worth only about 12s. in certain world markets.

Foreign exchanges are usually unfavourable at this season of the year owing to our heavy purchases of foodstuffs and raw materials, particularly wheat and cotton. In the old days the exchanges could fluctuate only narrowly within well-defined limits, because at a certain point it was cheaper to ship gold than to buy, say, dollars.

If the outflow became inconvenient the Bank of England raised its discount rate to such a level as might be necessary, and the current was promptly reversed.

Gold, however, to a great extent has ceased to function in this way, and the exchanges move in wide curves according to the size of the balance of payments between different centres, while mere speculators can take liberties which they dared not risk previously.

Speculation Factor

There is no doubt that speculation has been an important factor in recent exchange vagaries, but it is not surprising that there is an impression that we owe more than we have to receive—in other words, that we are a debtor nation.

Temporarily, that is perhaps true as regards "current account." By far the largest item in international payments is represented by imports and exports of goods.

For the seven months to the end of July Britain imported £168,680,000 more than she exported, an increase of £24,630,000 over the corresponding period of last year. For the whole of last year this so-called adverse trade balance was £264,000,000, and in 1931 it was as much as £408,000,000.

These look very formidable amounts, and if they stood alone they would indicate that we are drawing dangerously on our capital resources. Fortunately, however, there are important offsets in the shape of what are known as "invisible exports." These consist mainly of interest on foreign investments, and revenue from shipping, insurance, banking, and other services.

The Board of Trade has for many years made a calculation of the total amount of these items, which is very valuable as a basis of comparison, although there are independent investigators who maintain that the official estimates are too conservative.

However that may be, the results are interesting. Last year the invisible exports were estimated at £280,000,000, so that there was an apparent adverse balance of only £4,000,000, as against £59,000,000 in 1932 and £104,000,000 in 1931. Every previous year for which records are available showed a substantial balance in our favour, with the exception of 1926, when there was a deficiency of £14,000,000.

Depression Effect

In 1928 and 1929 net income from abroad amounted to £475,000,000 and £484,000,000 respectively, and the total surplus for these two years was £226,000,000.

It must be remembered, too, that a large proportion of the profits made by British-owned commercial undertakings abroad remains in the country of origin and does not figure in the returns, but is added to the sum of foreign investments.

The sharp decline in these invisible exports during the past three years is mainly due to world depression accentuated by exchange difficulties and restrictions. It is estimated by the League of Nations Bureau that the volume of international trade has dropped 50 per Unusual recovery of gold ore from mine tailings at the bottom of May Lady Lake in Mono County, Cal., is contemplated by local men.

C. L. Copper and O. H. Kirkwood reported that to get to the tailings—from which they expected to extract $5 a ton in gold—they will have to dredge the ore from the ice-cold waters from a depth of 20 feet. There are 165,000 tons of tailings in the lake, it was estimated.

The May Lady mine, from which the tailings were extracted, has not been worked since 1912. The mine building cling precariously to the face of a precipitous mountain.

OIL PRODUCTION RESTRICTION IN U.S. TO BE INVESTIGATED SUPREME COURT HEARING DOLLAR DEVALUATION VALIDITY

SPECIAL TO CHINA MAIL.
New York, To-day.
The United States Supreme Court, which went into session yesterday, has decided to hear the attacks testing the constitutionality of the regulations restricting oil production, drawn up by the Minister of Interior, Mr. Harold L. Ickes. The court also promised to determine the validity of dollar devaluation.

The appeal in which Mr. Frederick Campbell, a New York lawyer, attacked the validity of the gold hoarding regulations, was rejected by the Court.

The Court announced its intent to scrutinize the validity of devaluation when it agreed to review the attack on the law as applied to the bonds of the Baltimore-Ohio Railroad, in which Mr. Norman C. Norman, a New York shareholder, challenged the failure of the Railroad to pay U.S.$22.50 interest in gold or the present equivalent of the dollars gold content prior to devaluation. The New York State Court appeals were sustained in law.

The case is the first to reach Supreme Court involving Administration currency policies. — United Press, per S. E. Levy and Company.

Slender Hope Of Salvage

SUFFOLK LEAVING TO-NIGHT

The whole of the officers and crew of the s.s. City of Cambridge, which is lying hard and fast on a reef on Pratas Island, have been successfully taken off by boats from H.M.S. Suffolk, despite the heavy seas which were running this morning when the rescue was effected.

It is learned that the H.M.S. Suffolk is expected to leave the scene this evening, bound for Hong Kong.

Although the personnel have left the ill-fated ship, and the salvage tug is unable to reach Pratas, owing to the heavy seas, there is still hope that the ship will be salvaged. She is, however, badly holed owing to being pounded on the reef since she ran aground on Saturday morning.

NULLAH MURDER APPEAL

Misdirection Of Jury Alleged By Mr. Lim

"WRONGFUL REFUSAL BY TRIAL JUDGE"

Arguments on points of fact and law in support of the appeal against the death sentence passed on Ng Lok-yuen on September 9 at the Criminal Sessions for the murder of Michael Pine, aged 8, by throwing him into the nullah at the Lower Peak Tramway Station on June 22, were put forward by Mr. R. C. H. Lim, counsel for the appellant, in the Court of Criminal Appeal, comprising Mr. Justice P. Jackson and Mrs. J. J. Hayden, at Supreme Court this morning, when the hearing was resumed.

Mr. J. A. Fraser, Assistant Attorney-General, was for the Crown, assisted by Mr. W. J. Lockhart Smith.

Mr. Lim referred to authorities quoted at yesterday's hearing in support of his submission that the defence should have been put fairly to the jury and that misdirection on the points of the two bruises, and the identification parade at which Mary Pine attended, were so material that the appeal must now be allowed.

There was no evidence on which the jury could convict, said Mr. Lim, and in arriving at their deliberation they must have been influenced by misdirection, he stated.

Mr. Fraser pointed out that he did suggest either in his opening or summing up that the bruises marks on Mary Pine's neck may have been caused by the appellant in his action in throwing her into the nullah, but that it was a suggestion open to him to make. He had not stated that there were any witnesses who could give evidence on the point, because there were no witnesses. It was part of the Crown's case, said Mr. Fraser.

The point of Law, which the defence appealed against, was the wrongful refusal of the trial judge to withdraw the case from the jury on the Crown's failure to produce Mary Pine and that the verdict was against the weight of evidence.

Mr. Lim referred in detail to the evidence produced by the Crown, claiming that there was no direct evidence in the case. He also quoted authorities in support of his argument.

The hearing is proceeding.

10 DOG TAILS AND SOME FUR

Professional Dog Dealer Gaoled On 3 Counts

"It seems as though he is a professional dog dealer. In his room were two live dogs, 10 dog tails, a quantity of dog's fur, seven dog muzzles and six collars," said Detective-Sergeant Franklin when prosecuting Laong Ying, a 43-year-old unemployed, before Mr. E. I. Wynne Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning for stealing a dog's collar, with the license badge attached, having possession of one black chow bitch, knowing that it had been stolen, and keeping one yellow chow dog without a license at No. 118, Yee Kuk Street.

For keeping the dog without a license the defendant was fined $5, in default seven days, for having possession of the dog he was sentenced to four months' hard labour, and for stealing the collar a sentence of one month's hard labour was imposed, to run concurrently.

To-day's Short Story.

Gentlemen's Game

By H. C.
Meade

"HELEN Blazes" McGrogan, the skipper of the Earthly Paradise, went ashore at Chapopoules with £25 in his pockets. He sprang from a dinghy pitching in a short sea on to a concrete quay, and the encounter of his feet with the flooring reproduced the sound of the words "sprat-mackerel." Pulling up short and panting, the skipper stood by a stanchion and sniffed the Greek coast like a dog.

His boat crew of two watched him with malice as they oscillated at the foot of the pier.

Some mountains lay in front of McGrogan and someone had hung a handful of buildings, held down by a tall chimney, at their feet. The unmistakable banners of fish and garlic flaunted in the nose of the new arrival.

He squared his blue serge shoulders, shot his cuffs, and pushed his bowler hat over the left ear. Then he turned to his boatmen and cursed them with fervour and without apparent reason. He began from his stomach and worked up to a stream of invective which turned him round the eye-brows.

"Be back for me at 1.45," was the gist of the skipper's remarks. At the end he took himself neatly between two crescent barrels, and rolled away over the contoured streets toward the main thoroughfare of Chapopoules.

The two seamen watched the squat and diminishing figure until it was blotted out by a motor-lorry. "Goin' gamblin'," muttered the elder of the oarsmen to his mate.

The latter spat into the pale blue water. "Hope they trim 'im," he replied vindictively, and banged his oar in the oarlock.

McGrogan did not know Chapopoules, but he knew Greeks, and the probabilities of finding a gambling house he considered odds-on. Gambling was the skipper's life ever since, years before, he had made ten shillings by betting that his grandmother died before Christmas. And McGrogan could spot a gaming house or a gambling man with the same certitude that a monkey pick out a flea. The houses might be disguised as Sunday schools or ginlet factories, but the skipper would know them.

Secure in the belief in his own capabilities, he made his way between hovels and goat vehicles until he came to a shop with pots and pans in its window. A lean Greek lounged against the lintel post, smoking a cigar that was like a snake in the springtime.

The skipper looked at the shop and the Greek with his head on one side, and his ears picked up the shuffle of cards from the interior.

The Greek returned the skipper's gaze. He did not know McGrogan, but he knew sailors, and the smile on his face would have floated on water.

His eyes lighted, and he withdrew the sinuous tobacco confection from under his rat-tail moustache. His body bent itself into a rough representation of the letter "S." He spread out his arms in invitation before the unsteady doorway.

The skipper accepted, and ducked inside.

The interior was dark, and furnished with a long table. They were playing cards at this table now, and the skipper could see four pairs of eyes watching him unwinkingly.

The doorway Greek plucked at McGrogan's elbow. "You want play?" he inquired.

"I'll play, Johnny," said the skipper. "What did you think I came in for? To buy a pan?"

The gamblers re-sorted themselves at the table to give him room. McGrogan seated himself just under a clay water bottle, and examined the features of his acquaintances. A black-bearded Levantine faced him, and on the right of this worthy sat a Turk. They had faces like the neither millstone. The remaining two players the skipper presumed to be Greeks.

The two Greeks fitted into each other like adjacent pieces of a jigsaw puzzle. In English, beyond poker parlance, one of them could say "very good," the other could say "very bad." The Turk could count up to 17. The Levantine seemed ignorant of all languages, and it was tacitly decided to take his money and ignore him. Often in the course of the game his face showed great emotion.

The Turk, whose turn it was to deal, declined in favour of the new member, and he handed the skipper the cards, with a magnificent flourish. "Helen Blazes" ruffed them cunningly and rapidly. But, before he dealt, he touched with his elbow the comforting bulge in his hip pocket which was his automatic. After

YOUNG CHINESE IS CHARGED ON FIVE COUNTS

Alleged Trick On Jewellers

EMBEZZLEMENT OF $300 AND THEFT OF CHEQUE BOOK

The man, who was alleged to have gone into Messrs. Sennet, Freres to obtain a valuable diamond ring by a trick last week, was charged before Mr. Q. A. A. Macfadyen at the Central Magistracy this morning, on five counts.

Fung Kit-sang, a 27-year-old unemployed, who, it was reported, gave his name as K. C. Chan at Sennet, Freres, was charged with (a) the embezzlement, of the sum of $300 from Messrs. Goddard and Douglas and Company on December 12, 1933, (b) the theft of a cheque book, the property of Major Eastwick Field, of Lyemum Barracks, (c) receiving the stolen cheque book, (d) the attempted larceny, by a trick, of a diamond ring, the property of Messrs. Sennet, Freres on October 4, and (e) having obtained an electric fan, the property of Messrs. Batten and Company, by false pretences, on September 18.

Accused pleaded guilty to (a) and (b), but denied (d) and (e) charges. Charge (c) was automatically dropped.

The charge of attempted larceny by a trick of the diamond ring was withdrawn, Mr. Macfadyen saying that the intention did not wholly lie with defendant, and that in this case the defendant did not actually have the ring in his possession.

On (e) charge, Inspector J. Murphy said that accused went to Messrs. Batten and Company, and obtained the fan saying that his master had instructed him to secure it. After getting the fan, accused then sold it to his master, saying that it was his own.

The hearing of the case was fixed for next Saturday.

that he entered the game with such confidence as his fellow players were capable of inspiring.

When McGrogan picked up his cards he found three kings to go on with, and opened the pot to the limit. One by one players fell by the wayside until only the Turk was left. The latter and the skipper raised each other back and forth a few times, and the Turk finally called.

"Three kings," said the skipper. "Three aces" replied the Turk, and he raked in the money, flipping his cards face downward into the discard.

McGrogan was on his feet like a cat. "Where are they?" he shouted. "Let's see 'em!" The Turk looked pained.

ENGLAND'S CROP OF TOBACCO

Harvest Begun On The Only Farm

OWNER'S PLEA FOR PROTECTION

The tobacco harvest is now being gathered on the only commercial tobacco farm in England. It is owned by Mr. A. J. Brandon, of Church Crookham, Hampshire, a pioneer who has grown more than thirty varieties of tobacco.

In spite of this experience, it is still doubtful which is the most suitable type for English soils and climate.

This year Mr. Brandon has devoted six acres to the crop, and an output of 600lb. to 700lb. an acre is expected. But it is grown at a loss. He believes that tobacco growing in Britain has been killed by Government action.

The fact that in 1959 tobacco growing was a flourishing industry in 31 English counties shows that a good deal of land is suited to the crop.

Home-grown tobacco now pays the same rate of duty as Empire tobacco. Blenders who had been willing to take English tobacco for blending with American supplies now use Empire tobacco because it is cheaper.

Taste For Virginia

A Government Committee on tobacco-growing in England reached the conclusion, in 1923, that only tobacco of low grade can be grown generally in Great Britain; but Mr. Brandon maintains that the British palate has become too accustomed to the flavour of American tobaccos.

The crop can be grown in England on the lightest soil which, under ordinary conditions, will not repay the cost of cultivation.

Mr. Brandon declares that if tobacco-growing were given a measure of effective protection over a period of years the industry would find its feet, and thousands of acres could be brought back under the plough.

The industry provides something like £150 an acre annually in wages, though the amount varies in different parts of the country.

At present it costs the Government about £200 a year to collect the Excise Duty on Mr. Brandon's tobacco.

WOMEN'S MISSIONARY CENTENARY

Steady Growth Of A Great Work

MANSION HOUSE MEETING

On October 15, at the Mansion House, there is to be held, at the invitation of the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress, a meeting to mark the centenary of a women's movement which has done splendid work throughout the world.

In 1834 was formed, in the vestry of St. John's Chapel, Bedford Row, London (since demolished), the first women's missionary organization known by the cumbersome title "The Society for Promoting Female Education in the East."

At a meeting addressed by David Abel, an American missionary, in Bedford Row, and attended by a number of women representing the leading churches of London, the first women's missionary organization was formed, and a committee of 24 women of different denominations was appointed.

Among Early Pioneers

One of the early missionaries of the S.F.F.E. was a Miss Twidly, daughter of a Wesleyan minister, who was sent to start educational work in Jaffna, Ceylon, in 1838. She later married the Rev. Peter Batchelor. She conceived the idea that the Methodist Church should form a women's organization of its own, and it was at her suggestion that, in 1858, "The Ladies' Committee for the Amelioration of the Condition of Women in Heathen Countries, Female Education, etc." was formed. Its first missionary, Miss Beal, went to British Honduras in 1859. Other women were sent in due course to Fiji, South Africa, India, and West Africa.

The announcement, later denied, that Mr. Andrew W. Mellon, former Secretary of the Treasury, had sold the Raphael "Alba Madonna" for $1,500,000 to the Raphael "Alba Madonna" recalls that America houses some of the finest private art collections in the world. At the turn of the century, America's capitalists sent a golden flood to Europe in exchange for whole cargoes of old masters. Joseph E. Widener, Belmont race track czar, possesses, according to eminent critics, the most harmonious private art collection in America, worth many millions. A Philadelphia suburb neighbour, Dr. Albert C. Barnes, has the second largest collection of modern paintings in the world. With the death of the elder J. P. Morgan, the internationally famous collection of canvases was dispersed. Most of the Morgan treasures now consist of priceless books manuscripts in the famous Morgan library.

"BEAKER" BURIALS AT AVEBURY

Site May Be Given To The Nation

EARLY BRONZE AGE FIND

It is possible that the site of the ancient avenue of sarsen stones (large boulders or blocks of sandstone) at Avebury, Wiltshire, may be bought and handed over to the nation in consequence of discoveries made during excavations in the past five months.

Three of the stones have carved circles and cup marks artificially cut on them, and these markings are regarded as important since this is the first time they have been found on such stones anywhere in the South of England.

Remains of two "beaker" burials, and of a third, also undoubtedly of early Bronze Age, have been uncovered. The first consisted of shards of a beaker, together with the small bones of a human skeleton which had been disturbed or damaged when the stone was buried by a farmer to facilitate ploughing.

In the second "burial" the upper part of the skeleton was still in its original position—a crouched attitude—and the skull was in a good state of preservation. The excavators also found fragments of an early Bronze Age beaker, and these are considered as one of the most important made at Avebury so far as direct evidence of the date of the stones is concerned.

Skeleton Found

The third burial was absolutely intact, in a large oval, situated, as usual, on the east side of the spot where a stone, since destroyed, had stood. This was also a crouched burial, and behind the shoulder of the skeleton was standing a pot, complete, but somewhat crushed, of a type not hitherto known. The skeleton will be sent to the Royal College of Surgeons for report.

Six more buried stones have been recently found, and these, with others was also a crouched burial, and being re-erected in their proper position in the avenue, and two broken ones are to be repaired.

The site of holes from which stones have been removed or destroyed, are to be indicated on the ground by suitable markings, and the avenue is being fenced in.

RAILWAY EXTENSION IN SHANSI

Steps are now being taken by the Shanai Provincial Government for the extension of the Tientsin-Puchow Railway from Chiehshui to Linfen making the line 640 miles long. Following the completion of the extension, several branch lines are to be built.

60 RESCUED FROM FREIGHTER

Fine Work by Crew Of H.M.S. Suffolk At Pratas

CITY OF CAMBRIDGE STILL HARD AND FAST

Risking their own lives, the crew of H.M.S. Suffolk succeeded yesterday in rescuing 60 men from the stranded Bank line steamer, City of Cambridge, which ran aground on Pratas Reef early on Saturday morning in typhoon weather.

Rough weather continues in the vicinity of Pratas and 20 men still remain on board the stranded freighter. It is hoped that the weather will abate sufficiently for them to be transferred to the British cruiser to-day.

H.M.S. Suffolk left Hong Kong on immediate receipt of an S.O.S. call from the freighter and arriving the same day found the vessel hard and fast on the reef. Efforts to reach the vessel by lifeboats was impossible, and although further attempts were made on Sunday, the ship still remained unapproachable.

A tugboat from Talook Docks also went to the scene on Saturday but was forced to return owing to bad weather. The tugboat, however, left again yesterday afternoon.

The vessel is aground on the south-east bend of Pratas Reef and is being continuously pounded by heavy seas.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

Japanese Facing Serious Libel Charges

H. K. POLICE INVOLVED

Goro Kurata, a Japanese photographer, who is alleged to have published a false and defamatory libel concerning the Hong Kong Police Force on August 31, was committed to stand his trial at the next criminal sessions by Mr. E. W. Hamilton at the Central Magistracy yesterday.

There are two charges against the defendant. The first relates to the allegation that on August 31 he published a false and defamatory libel concerning the Hong Kong Police Force in the form of an anonymous letter to the Inspector of Police, Hong Kong, which contained the following:—"All these heads are the best friends of the Police Dept. of Wanchai are under the influence of bribery."

The second charge, similarly worded, concerns an anonymous letter to the "Protector of Chinese," Hong Kong. Mr. T. Murphy, Assistant Director of Criminal Intelligence (Crime), conducted the prosecution.

MORE ACTIVITY ON WALL STREET

Favourable factors prior to the opening: (1) Sentiment is more cheerful. (2) Most commentators on the market were inclined to expect some extension of the recent rally. (3) The continued strength of Government bonds, which many Traders believe reflects a firmer stand by the Administration against further currency inflation.

Unfavourable factors were: (1) Profit-taking continues to retard advances. (2) Seasonal improvements in the heavy industries, so far, are somewhat disappointing.

Night Telegrams

The following telegrams were received by Messrs. S. E. Levy and Company, through Reuter, last night:—

Wall Street is moderately active and steady, with minor fractional movements either way. Traders continue to adopt a cautious attitude. At the same time, the opinion is held that the market is in a position to readily respond to any constructive news.

Steel operations in Youngstown this week are expected at 26 per cent. of capacity, a decline of 3 per cent. as compared with the previous week, but will subsequently advance again to 30 per cent. of capacity.

The publication "Steel" says that although there has been a slight gain in the number of size orders, operations have been maintained at 25 per cent. of capacity. The improved sentiment was based on expectation of long-deferred replacement orders, which have not yet resulted in any large-scale buying. The "Steel" expressed the opinion that heavy users are making every effort to delay purchasing, apparently on expectation of lower prices.

Steel mill activity is estimated at 23.6 per cent. of capacity, compared with 23.2 per cent. the previous week. Weekly business failures amounted to 248, as compared with 208 failures the previous week and 263 failures last year.

General Motor's sales to consumers in the United States during September totalled 71,648 cars, against 71,458 cars last year; sales to dealers in the United States totalled 58,738 cars, against 67,738 cars in September of last year; World sales to dealers were 71,888 cars as compared with 81,148 last year.

E. A. Pierce Co.'s Report
In their market report, the American Oriental Finance Corporation, correspondent for Messrs. E. A. Pierce and Company New York state:

"Stocks:—The market was uneventful, with no particular news. The underlying sentiment seems to be a trifle better."

"Wheat:—There was no news to account for the late selling. Argentine has reported some frost. The Trade anticipated a continuance of decreasing visible supplies for some time."

"By Karol of Abyssinia!" roared the skipper, "no—Turk is a-goin' to twist me! I want a look at 'em!"

But the Greek of the doorway, who had come to the skipper's side like a piece of gentle, white thistle-down, smiled ingratiatingly. "No, no," he said to the others; no kill heem. Not yet. Mebbe he no understand."

"If there's any killin'—" began the skipper, sinking his head into his shoulders.

"Ahh—no!" pleaded the Greek, extending two smooth brown hands palms up. "Here we all gentlemen. No show cards." He nodded with a grave and complacent pride, "All gentlemen, all."

The skipper's forehead was like a washing board. "You mean that these—these people never show their cards?" he demanded incredulously.

Th Greek nodded furiously.

McGrogan sucked in his breath. He looked wonderingly at the depraved set of faces. At length he smiled slowly. "Well," he said, "right you are." And he resumed his seat.

After that the skipper made money fast, not being handicapped by any compulsory fairness.

He felt sorry that his ship was due to sail at 2 p.m. Give him a few days at this establishment and he would be a millionaire.

He looked at his watch with a sigh. It was 1.15. "Two more hands, gents," he said with sardonic regret; "my ship's due to sail."

The assembly stared blankly. They were good gamblers, and the skipper was pleased with them and with himself. His pockets bulged voluptuously.

The last two hands the skipper won by calling two small clubs a full house in the first, and by promoting a pair of eights to the dignity of three queens in the second. The final winnings stuffed his pockets to overflowing, and, in a generous mood, he flung the overflow to the Greek who had admitted him to the game.

"Pleasure," said that gentleman, showing his teeth. "All zese uzzer gentlemen pleased also."

McGrogan thought that the gentlemen did not look pleased, but again that might have been his sensitive imagination. "What do you get out of it, Johnny?" he asked, with a large seafaring laugh. "Do you own the show?"

"Please?" said the Greek, wrinkling up his olive oil face. "Own? Ahhh—no! No own. I detective."

"Detective?" demanded McGro-

gan. "What do you mean detective?"

The Greek looked sad. He found the explanation too much for his English. "Come," he said, "I show." And, followed by the curious skipper, he went to the darkest corner of the hut. Here, after wrestling with a species of handle in the flooring, he succeeded in raising a trapdoor. "You see?" he said, pointing down into the blackness.

The skipper peered over the man's shoulder. He saw the flash of water, and heard a fierce rushing sound.

"Zis is rivaire," the Greek told him. "One time man he play, like you—but he is no gentlemen. He say 'four kings.' He no have got. Uzzer gentlemen holding two kings. Zat man we put down here. Zis is game for gentlemen only. Zat what I do. I detective."

McGrogan drew back from the hole. His four late fellow players watched him steadily. They were between him and the sunlit doorway, and McGrogan thought he had never seen so beautiful a sight as that speckled, off-strewn street, one or two of these men he might, of course, shoot; but he was afraid that if he shot all five it would be equivalent to murder. His nervous system experienced that fading away feeling, and the skipper permitted it to carry him imperceptibly to the doorway.

The Greek let the trapdoor down with a bang. He nodded rapidly, his teeth flashing in the shadow. "Good game," he said.

The four card players sat like the audience at an interesting play.

The blessed sun struck sudden and warm on the skipper's neck, and with a prodigious backward step he reached the street. He drew a long breath, squared his shoulders, shot his cuffs, and began his journey back to the quayside at a pace that was beneath his dignity.

The boat crew was waiting for him, meekly munching his tobacco ration. It had been waiting for more than 15 minutes, and, for once, the skipper had no abuse to distribute. He beamed upon the two homely seamen. "Sorry I've kept you lads waiting," he said.

Old Israel Hanns nearly swallowed his tobacco, but the younger carman, emboldened by this extraordinary courtesy, said, "Had and luck, cap'n."

"Fairish, fairish," chuckled the skipper, punching himself on the pockets. "And now let's see how quick you men can take this boat to the ship. I want to get away to time."

THE END.

Market Disturbed By Car Sale Decline

COMMODITY INTEREST LOW

SPECIAL TO CHINA MAIL.

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1924, Received October 9, 9.58 a.m.)

New York, To-day.

Traders continue to be apathetic.

Favourable market factors yesterday were that retail trade is continuing to boom, the expected dividend action, the steadiness of steel production, and the easing of the Spanish situation.

Unfavourable factors were the General Motors' sales decline, the lack of interest in commodities, and the decreasing output of motor-cars.

WALL STREET AGAIN BRIGHTENS

Automobile Sales Will Be Higher

SPECIAL TO CHINA MAIL.

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1924, Received October 9, 9.58 a.m.)

New York, To-day.

Dow-Jones is predicting a continuation of the advance on Wall Street.

Favourable factors yesterday were that the New York Times business index is at 73.7, as against 72.3 last week and 78.4 last year, and that the leading automobile executives forecast that 1935 sales will be from 15 per cent. to 20 per cent. above the 1934 sales.

Unfavourable factors were that Steel operations in the Youngstown district are at 26 per cent. of capacity, as against 29 per cent. the previous week, although operations are expected to exceed 30 per cent. before the end of the week.

RESCUE WORK AT PRATAS

City Of Cambridge Disaster

64 RESCUED BY SUFFOLK

London, To-day.

The cruiser, H. M. S. Suffolk, yesterday rescued six officers, three apprentices, and 55 lascars members of crew of the s.s. City of Cambridge, the 7,058 tons, cargo steamer, which went aground on Prates Reef, in the South China sea, on Saturday morning.

The Suffolk, which had been despatched on Saturday with all speed to the scene of wreck from Hong Kong, 200 miles away, made several unsuccessful attempts on Sunday to reach the vessel, which was swept by mountainous seas, and the cruiser stood by throughout the night.

The attempts were renewed at daybreak, and, under perilous conditions, the rescues were effected.

The captain, five officers, and 15 lascars, still remain on the City of Cambridge, which is reported on an even keel but with her bow completely out of the water, while at the stern, the loss of her propeller is visible.

Salvage seems improbable, but there is every prospect of the remaining members of her crew being rescued.
